Children and Violence in Schools

Every time a school tragedy occurs it leaves many questions and anxieties for children. Dr. David Lowenstein, an expert in child and family psychology, can share ways to address the following questions your child may have:

- Could this happen to me?
- Is there anyone in my class who might do this?
- Why did that kid do that?
- What did those kids do that made him want to shoot them?

Dr. Lowenstein's advice will help your readers/viewers/listeners talk to their children about tragedies like these and help them feel safe in their own school.

How can we prevent this from happening again?

While its impossible to predict an event like this, Dr. Lowenstein will share warning signs of violent tendencies that parents and caregivers should look out for and measures they can take to discourage violent behavior in children and teenagers.

Dr. David Lowenstein is a psychologist with 25 years experience in private practice in Columbus, OH, specializing in individual, family and group therapy with children, adolescents and adults.
